Holst, Advokater

Holst, guide

Setting up business in Denmark

Foreign companies may conduct business in Denmark either by establishing a Danish subsidiary or by operating directly through a branch office in Denmark.

A subsidiary is an independent Danish company. A share capital in the amount of DKK 50,000 is needed to establish a private limited company (in Danish: "ApS"). The establishment of a subsidiary will often be the preferred choice, if the aim is to limit liability on the part of the foreign parent company.

A branch office has no share capital since such entity forms an integral part of the main company (a division of the foreign company). The advantage of a branch office is that no initial capital needs to be contributed. Companies already incorporated in other EU or EEA countries are allowed to set up branch offices in Denmark, whereas companies in other countries must document the right to set up business in Denmark by way of an international agreement, or it must be demonstrated that Danish companies enjoy a similar right of establishment in the relevant country.

For tax purposes, it is of no major significance which solution is chosen. A Danish branch office is comparable to a Danish subsidiary since branch offices are regarded as "permanent establishments", meaning that the foreign parent company must register the income and expenses attributable to the branch office separately in order for the Danish branch office to be able to file its own tax return on expiry of each income year. This may give rise to several administrative challenges which may again speak in favour of establishing a subsidiary. The tax rate in Denmark is 22 % (2017), and this rate applies to both public limited companies, private limited companies and branch offices. For accounting purposes, however, the obvious advantage of branch offices is that the annual report of a branch office is not publicly accessible in Denmark. Therefore, the setting up of a branch office in Denmark will make it possible to prevent competitors from gaining insight into the financial details of the branch office.

A final option is to set up a representative office for the purpose of gathering information on the Danish market and/or operating a showroom to promote the products of a foreign company. In such set-up, however, it is not legally possible to make any kind of sales contracts, agreements etc. committing neither the representative office nor the foreign company.

See table on page 2.

Holst, Advokater provides legal advisory services regarding all aspects of Danish corporate and commercial law. We have extensive expertise and experience in assessing and addressing any corporate or commercial law issue that may arise when setting up and operating a business in Denmark. We have on-line access to the Danish Business Authority, and this enables us to implement quick and highly effective registrations for our clients with the Agency, for instance in connection with the formal incorporation of companies, amendments to corporate documents, capital increases etc.

Holst, Advokater info@holst-law.com Hans Broges Gade 2 DK-8100 Aarhus C T, +45 8934 0000 F, +45 8934 0001

Holst, Advokater

|                        | Subsidiary   | Branch office   | Representative office   |
|------------------------|--|---|---|
| Setting up procedure   | A subsidiary can be establis-hed subject to cash paymentof DKK 50,000; in principle asubsidiary can be establishedby all nationalities.  | Easy and low-cost solution tocompanies domiciled in otherEU and EEA countries; limitedoption for other nationalities.   | Very few formal requirements forestablishment, but highly limitedpossibility of pursuing activitiesother than activities of an obser-vatory nature. |
| Annual reports         | An audited annual report mustbe prepared; the report is pub-licly accessible. In some cases,this requirement may beexempted from.  | An audited annual report mustbe prepared, separating theactivities of the branch officefrom those of the main com-pany; the report is not publiclyaccessible.   | Annual report not required; no taxable activities allowed.  |
| Liability              | Liability limited to the share capital of the subsidiary.  | Main company has full liability for any and all activities pursued.   | Main company has full liability for any and all activities pursued.   |
| Тах                    | Corporate tax of 22 %.   | Corporate tax of 22 %.  | No tax charged; no taxable acti-vities allowed.   |
| Dividend               | No tax payable on dividendfrom subsidiaries if the parentcompany owns at least 10% ofthe share capital and the pa-rent company is domiciled inan EU or an EEA country or in acountry having entered into adouble taxation agreementwith Denmark. | Due to transparency betweenthe branch office and theforeign main company, no divi-dend is distributed to the maincompany.   | No taxable activities allowed; nodividend available for distributi-on.  |
| Structural changes     | Subsidiaries are subject to allformal national rules, includingequity capital requirements,rules on capital changes,liquidation etc.   | Branch officers are governed bythe corporate law rules of thehome country. Branch officescan easily be closed down and/or converted into subsidiaries;both of which may, however,give rise to taxation on any in-crease in value. | Easy to close down.   |
| Transfer pricing rules | Subsidiaries are subject to theordinary rules on transfer pri-cing. When calculating taxableincome, pricing must be madeon market terms equivalent towhat could have been obtai-ned between independentparties.                                      | No transfer between differentlegal entities due to transparen-cy between the branch officeand the foreign main company.   | No taxable activities allowed; notapplicable.   |

- Bart

1000

Martin Contraction

2

11

Hans Broges gade 2 DK-8100 Aarhus C

T, 8934 0000 F, 8934 0001